You act like we are too young, like we are silly little kids. Like the words blared on the news are too big. God forbid we hear the words on the tip of your tongue. You act like we do not go about our daily lives in fear. Fearing that one day the name of our school will be a headline, hoping that one day it isn't mine. “__ Dead and __ Injured During a Pep Rally at __ High School”. You are right. We are too young to vote. That does not mean that we are too young to know. We are not too young to know that the president that you adore has been showing people like me to the door. A typical high school bully except he acts like a child. Having his food fed to him, he sits in a high chair, until everyone that doesn't look like him is exiled. Protected by the tall white walls and the bunker underneath, he pokes fun at our grief. We watch as the endangered species we watched at the zoo become extinct and the justice for people like George Floyd and Breonna Taylor is long overdue. Some of us may be too young to vote but we are not too young to notice. And so I ask. I ask those that are not too young, those that are able to, those that care for society and its future generations. I ask that you are not afraid or hesitant to lead the demonstrations. To vote, not against any single power, but towards a common goal- towards the goal that our children will no longer have to live in a world that lacks in soul.
